over the years pragmatics the study of the use and meaning of utterances to their situations has become a more and more important branch of linguistics as the inadequacies of a purely formalist abstract approach to the study of language have become more evident this book presents a rhetorical model of pragmatics that is a model which studies linguistic communication in terms of communicative goals and principles of good communicative behaviour in this respect geoffrey leech argues for a rapprochement between linguistics and the traditional discipline of rhetoric he does not reject the chomskian revolution of linguistics but rather maintains that the language system in the abstract i e the grammar broadly in chomsky s sense must be studied in relation to a fully developed theory of language use there is therefore a division of labour between grammar and rhetoric or in the study of meaning between semantics and pragmatics the book s main focus is thus on the development of a model of pragmatics within an overall functional model of language in this it builds on the speech act theory of austin and searle and the theory of conversational implicature of grice but at the same time enlarges pragmatics to include politeness irony phatic communion and other social principles of linguistic behaviour eighteen essays by leading scholars in english speech communication education and philosophy explore the vitality of the classical rhetorical tradition and its influence on both contemporary discourse studies and the teaching of writing some of the essays investigate the rhetorical and historical issues others show the bearing of classical rhetoric on contemporary problems in composition thus blending theory and practice common to the varied approaches and view points expressed in this volume is one central theme the 20th century revival of rhetoric entails a recovery of the classical tradition with its marriage of a rich and fully articulated theory with an equally efficacious practice a preface demonstrates the contribution of edward p j corbett to the 20th century revival and a last chapter includes a bibliography of his works the roots of pragmatics reach back to antiquity especially to rhetoric as one of the three liberal arts however until the end of the 18th century proto pragmatic insights tended to be consigned to the pragmatic that is rhetoric wastepaper basket and thus excluded from serious philosophical consideration it can be said that pragmatics was conceived between 1780 and 1830 in britain but also in germany and in france in post lockian and post kantian philosophies of language these early conceptions of pragmatics are described in the first part of the book the second part of the book looks at pragmatic insights made between 1830 and 1880 when they were once more relegated to the philosophical and linguistic underground the main stage was then occupied by a fact hunting historical comparative linguistics on the one hand and a newly spiritualised philosophy on the other in the last part the period between 1880 and 1930 is presented when pragmatic insights flourished and were sought after systematically this was due in part to a new upsurge in empiricism positivism and later behaviourism in philosophy linguistics and psychology between 1780 and 1930 philosophers psychologists sociologists and linguists came to see that language could only be studied in the context of dialogue in the context of human life and finally as being a kind of human action itself seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject english language and literature studies linguistics grade 1 0 university of cologne englisches seminar course sociolinguistics language english abstract if today one thinks of politics politicians and their language there is one opinion that always comes first all politicians are liars they are smooth talkers who promise things they cannot fulfil only to get more votes in the coming up election and they use beautiful words to paraphrase and disguise social injustices and in some points this opinion is right there really is a specific political language used by the politicians to follow certain aims but this has not always to be disguise or circumscription what many of the citizens simply ignore is the fact that politicians are dependent from the mass without the public there would be no need for politicians and the same goes for political discussions politicians don't argue with each other because they like it it is always the fact that a political actor starts political relations with another actor and at the same time with the public if two politicians talk to each other on the television this is always orchestrated for the people who watch the show see dieckmann 1981 265 the main reason for every politician to lie or to use special vocabulary is for the purpose of being convincing this paper analyses the language used by politicians in certain situations to convince people of the correctness of their point of view in its roots mainly based on the book politically speaking the pragmatic analysis of political language by john wilson the main focus of this paper is put to the question of the use of the pronominal forms i and we in political talk under which conditions the one is used and when the other and what for it is not arguable that politicians always have a reason for using i or we in different contexts especially in written speeches that are planned and very well prepared also the difference between scripted and unscripted speeches will be touched in this paper to employ the theoretical basis that is provided here in the last section the famous sportpalast speech of joseph goebbels from 1943 will be analysed with regard to the use of different pronominal forms the final summary shall bundle the gained information to a logical minimum and draw some conclusions from it it will show if political use of speech is intentionally manipulating and disguising facts especially in the example of goebbels or if the use of language in politics does not differ in great parts from the day to day use at home this book focuses on historical pragmatics the author presents the use of reported speech in the early modern english records of a state trial of the elizabethan period it is worthy of note that the few acquitted defendants were more efficient in the application of manipulative reported speech strategies the results of qualitative and quantitative analyses confirm that reported speech is a marker of stance this book provides a new linguistic approach to argumentation theory its main goal is to integrate the logical dialectical and rhetorical dimensions of argumentation in a model providing a unitary treatment of its justificatory and persuasive powers this model takes as its basis speech acts theory in order to characterize argumentation as a second order speech act complex the result is a systematic and comprehensive theory of the interpretation analysis and evaluation of arguments this theory sheds light on the many faces of argumentative communication verbal and non verbal monological and dialogical literal and non literal ordinary and specialized the book takes into consideration the major current comprehensive accounts of good argumentation perelman s new rhetoric pragma dialectics the arg model the epistemic approach and shows that these accounts have fundamental weaknesses rooted in their instrumentalist conception of argumentation as an activity oriented to a goal external to itself furthermore the author addresses some challenging meta theoretical questions such as the justification problem for argumentation theory models and the relationship between reasoning and arguing part of a series in studies in rhetoric and communication this book casts a fresh light on the process by which scientific claims are validated if scientists cannot justify their claims in positivistic terms how can a scientific claim be legitimized this book shows how research in linguistic pragmatics philosophy of language and rhetoric can be connected through argumentation to analyze a recognizably common strategy used in political and everyday conversation namely the distortion of another's words in an argumentative exchange straw man argumentation refers to the modification of a position by misquoting misreporting or wrenching the original speaker's statements from their context in order to attack them more easily or more effectively through 63 examples taken from different contexts including political and forensic discourses and dialogs and 20 legal cases the book analyzes the explicit and implicit types of straw man shows how to assess the correctness of a quote or a report and illustrates the arguments that can be used for supporting an interpretation and defending against a distortion the tools of argumentation theory a discipline aimed at investigating the uses of arguments by combining insights from pragmatics logic and communication are applied to provide an original account of interpretation and reporting and to describe and illustrate tactics and procedures that can be used and implemented for practical purposes this book will appeal to scholars in the fields of political communication communication in general argumentation theory rhetoric and pragmatics as well as to people working in public speech speech writing and discourse analysis popular readings of Benjamin Lee Whorf's principle of linguistic relativity focus almost exclusively on the controversial notion that language constrains or determines thought recent scholarship has only begun to assess the creative epistemological and pragmatic dimensions of Whorf's theory of language and their compatibility with the ideas of his contemporaries in rhetoric philosophy and psychology this book provides a new reading of Whorf which situates his writings among those of Bakhtin vygotsky and wittgenstein exploring the ramifications of linguistic relativity for rhetorical theory the philosophy of language and interlingual discourse analysis the author re accentuates whorf s belief in the need to overcome linguacentrism and ethnocentrism through an enlightened multilingual awareness
